Elizabeth,

The Plan does acknowledge the potential for there to be T&E species in the potentially to be closed stock waters, as the following statement is included: "Because these stock ponds are part of on-going monitoring at Rosemont in relation to biological resources, any systems used to replace the ponds will need to be coordinated with the appropriate agency."

I would presume that USFWS would be an appropriate agency. IN any event, I let the herpetologists know that the tanks in question could be lost later on.

Thanks again for letting me know about all of this.

Elizabeth and Rob,

This is a fairly involved question that could require a bit of searching around and contacting colleagues and others. I'll have to hold off responding thoroughly until I can clear my other project. I'll shoot for next week, after the holiday, if that works for you.

Thanks.
